music student of the month

Wolf Zohar

Trumpet, 5th grade Band

Wolf chose to play the trumpet partly because its portability fits his life style - he and his family live on board a sailboat. Wolf loves sailing and is modifying his own 10' sailboat. His excitement in learning and doing was evident as he explained how the trumpet works:

"There are three fingerings to memorize in order to play all the notes. Playing a note is more about the mouth; less air makes a lower sound, and more air is higher. C is medium air and G is full air, and neither require pressing a valve."

The fifth grade Band class is learning notes and familiarizing themselves with their instruments as they learn to make music together as a group. "I like to plunk around and see what the trumpet can do. I know 12 notes already!"

Darren Dix, Band Director, says he chose Wolf as December's Music Student because, "Wolf has been making excellent progress on trumpet and already is developing a great characteristic tone. He is always excited to show me what he has practiced between classes."

Wolf says of Mr. Dix, "He is a wonderful teacher who never gives up."

Congratulations to Wolf Zohar,
